

Harford County Public Library Foundation elects Matthew Allison to board of directors

Harford County Public Library Foundation elected Matthew Allison, a corporate associate at Nemphos Braue to serve on its board of directors for a three-year term.

Harford County Public Library Foundation is a charitable organization that raises funds and awareness to support the library's services, resources and capital improvements beyond the capacity of the library's tax-funded operating budget, according to HCC.

"We are delighted to welcome Matthew Allison to the Foundation's Board," Amber Shrodes, director of philanthropy and community engagement said in a statement. "Our Board members are dedicated volunteers who champion our innovative and award-winning library system. Matthew's expertise and impressive background make him an outstanding addition to our team."

At Nemphos Braue, Allison supports clients across a number of industries while leveraging his background in mergers and acquisitions, financings and corporate governance, according to HCC.

He holds a law degree from the University of Baltimore School of Law, where he was editor-in-chief of the University of Baltimore Law Review and was the Distinguished Scholar in the Royal Graham Shannonhouse III Honor Society, according to HCC. He holds an MBA and bachelor of science degree in marketing and sociology from West Virginia Wesleyan College. He received the 2023-25 Rising Star Award from Maryland Super Lawyers.

Harford County Public Library Foundation is currently working on several projects including the 2nd Annual Taste of Harford at Vignon Manor Farm, on May 18 and the 21st Annual Gala at the Abingdon Library, Nov. 1.

More information may be found at hcplonline.org.