Harford Co. Library names new cultural arts coordinator

By Shaela Foster

Harford County Public Library named Meg McReynolds as the new cultural arts and community outreach coordinator.

Previously, McReynolds served at the National Endowment for the Humanities in a variety of programmatic roles. Most recently, she was there as an assistant director of NEH's Office of Federal/State Partnership, where she worked with 56 NEH-funded humanities councils.

In her new role, she'll oversee the Harford County Cultural Arts Advisory Board's initiatives, administer Maryland State Arts Council grants and champion local arts organizations, while also enhancing the library's community engagement efforts.

"Meg McReynolds brings extraordinary expertise in the cultural arts and humanities, with experience ranging from the National Endowment for the Humanities to the National Gallery of Art," said Mary Hastler, chief executive officer of Harford County Public Library.

"Her academic accomplishments, curatorial work and leadership at the national level make her an invaluable addition to the Library team. Harford County's cultural arts community is truly deserving of her knowledge, vision and passion, which will help advance and celebrate the arts across the county."
