

By Brian T. Krista | bkrista@tribpub.com

PUBLISHED: March 9, 2024 at 6:45 p.m. | UPDATED: March 12, 2024 at 11:20 a.m.

Harford County free laptop distribution | PHOTOS

Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services distributed 2,500 laptops through the Maryland Connected Devices program Saturday at the Edgewood Public Library.

Six-year-old Kaliyah McKinney of Edgewood, excitedly carries her family's new laptop out of the library during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents, by the Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Six-year-old Kaliyah McKinney of Edgewood, and her mother Collean, thank Patrick Dickerson, left, a grant specialist with Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, for his involvement in the distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Six-year-old Kaliyah McKinney of Edgewood, followed by her mother Collean, carries her family's new laptop through the stacks of the library during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents, by the Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Molly Marshall, an employee with Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, hands off a new computer to an applicant during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Employees with Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services work with applicants during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Patrick Dickerson, left, a grant specialist with Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, grabs a new computer for an applicant during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Employees with Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services work with applicants during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Mary Hastler, CEO of Harford County Public Library, talks with clients waiting their turn during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents, by the Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Grant specialist Patrick Dickerson, left, and Barbara Richardson, Director of Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, process applications from qualifying county residents during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)

Alicia Ward of Aberdeen accepts her new laptop during a distribution of HP Chromebook laptops to qualifying county residents, by the Harford County Department of Housing and Community Services, at the Edgewood Public Library on Saturday. The county will be distributing 2,500 laptops countywide through the Maryland Connected Devices program. (Brian Krista/staff photo)